

"It's a new kind of sculpture using natural elements of wood with crystals and gemstones. No two are the same in nature."

The Starlight table features bigleaf maple wood, lapis, aqua aura, pyrite, herkimer diamonds, blue hemimorphite and apophyllite, $5,600

GOOD VIBRATIONS
The Eye of the Universe table from Vibrational Furniture features semiprecious gemstones, chrysocolla, aqua aura and blue obsidian. $25,010

"I always have a table in my home, but someone always insists on buying it off of me. That is how the first table was sold."

Below: Danna Weiss, the designer of Vibrational Furniture, intuitively pieces the tables together.

"Rose quartz has the energy of love."

The Love table features bigleaf maple wood, rubies, pink tourmaline and cobalto calcite, $35,120

"I use a fine tweezer to set the most delicate of stones."

The Creator table features clara walnut wood, pyrite, amethyst, fluorite, citrine, amethyst fairy quartz and clear quartz, $15,200

NATURAL BEAUTY

"It's bringing energy into your home," says Danna Weiss, the sinewy designer behind Vibrational Furniture (vibrationalfurniture.com). The new line melds jewelry with home decor in the form of va-va-voom custom coffee tables crafted of 100-pound salvaged wooden slabs meticulously adorned with rare gems and mounted on modern bases. The native New Yorker and former celeb stylist splits her time between East Hampton and La Jolla. Her love affair with gems started early (she was a teen jewelry designer phenom), but, later, she turned to them for their healing power in curing a powerful infection. "I was always obsessed with gemstones and their metaphysical properties," says Weiss. Each table comes with its own "energy sheet" listing the gems' powers. But can you put your feet up on it? "Absolutely. Go ahead and kick up your Choos. I do." —Gillian Flynn